REFLECTION - 32ND SUNDAY OF ORDINARY TIME

“Are you afraid of death?” That’s a question not likely to be asked by a mainstream media person to someone on the street. Main reason: secularists, for reasons of their own, give wide berth to anything that is even remotely connected to God or religion. Lesser reason: death negates the bliss of any “I’m OK, you’re OK” kind of thinking.

But we should now and then ask that question of ourselves. No surprise to learn that most of us would answer “Yes.” Why? For one thing there is such an “eat, drink and be merry” outlook pushed by our present culture. For another, death is often put into such a scary context that no one in their right mind (not a Christ mind for sure) wants it to happen to them.

We note today the feigned interest of the Sadducees in the matter of the afterlife. I say that because they did not believe in an afterlife. They just wanted to mock the Master, especially His teaching about the resurrected life. As always, Jesus deftly handles the situation. He will not be dragged into a debate about who marries whom. He knew the questioners were using one of the oldest tricks in the book to tear down the credibility of an idea: sarcasm.

Instead, He reminds them of something they were forgetting: namely how their own great Moses spoke of God as a Lord of the living. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, their great patriarchs, were now living in eternity.

Consider today the outlook on death espoused by the brave Maccabees brothers cited in today’s First Reading. No fear among them as they faced torture and death for their belief in Yahweh’s care for them. For us, we have the word of Our Lord Jesus Christ. He alone is the bedrock of our belief in our resurrection. Talk about a firm foundation for belief! He is our resurrected Savior!

Of course, the Irish have their take on facing death that sometimes brings a laugh or two. There is the story of the old Irish pastor who stopped in on Paddy Murphy’s wake. Everybody was back in the kitchen, having a high old time. The deceased, Murphy, was alone on the front room of his house in his coffin, which sat on the floor because all the furniture had been moved into the kitchen.

The pastor was appalled at this lack of respect for the dead and stormed into the kitchen looking for some furniture with which to elevate Murphy’s coffin. At his appearance the crowd fell silent. The pastor cleared his throat and declared in his brogue: “I want three chairs for Mr. Murphy please.” There was a pause, and then everyone in the kitchen shouted together, “Hip, hip, hip, hooray!”

CORPUS CHRISTI NOTES

Many hands make light work. If you've heard this phrase I know you understand it's meaning. On Saturday September 17 we welcomed Rivier University students. During their day of service these helping hands came and painted the walls in the pantry and in the garage. What a difference a fresh coat of paint makes. It lightened and brightened both spaces. The walls look great and we were very grateful for their hard work
